Can you pursue what you love to do naturally and earn a living from it in a tough world based on money where you're constantly being pushed to be a functional worker doing a mundane job? I'm not talking about being an artist, an actor, a model or professional athlete. These are pipe dreams for almost everybody and they're frivolous too. These entertainment fields don't add value to the economy or to people's real lives. Paintings, somebody doing a cute dance in a music video or people chasing a ball around add nothing to the practical needs of life like food, clothing, energy, transportation, etc. I'm talking about doing something useful that can be fun and interesting for you and earn you a living. This book is about earning and making money for self-starters, misfits, creative people, adventurers and travelers who either: don't know what to do to earn a living don't want to sell their souls for an artificial job in the system do not have the personality to work a regular job do not want to be around other people want to work anywhere in the world want adventure, novelty and new experiences There are two main ways for a free spirit to earn money: do my own thing as in self-employment work an interesting job The 68 volumes are as follows: Volume 1. We study large-scale service systems with multiple customer classes and many statistically identical servers. The following question is addressed: How many servers are required (staffing) and how does one match them with customers (control) in order to minimize cost or maximize profit, subject to quality of service (QoS) constraints? We tackle this question by characterizing scheduling and staffing schemes that are asymptotically optimal in the limit, as system load grows to infinity. The main asymptotic regime considered is the many-server heavy-traffic Quality and Efficiency Driven (QED) regime. The Efficiency Driven (ED) regime is also studied. In the QED regime, which was formally introduced by Halfin and Whitt, a delicate balance is obtained between server efficiencies and quality of service. This balance is enabled by the economies of scale associated with the system size. Our main findings are: a) Decoupling of staffing and control, namely (i) Staffing disregards the multi-class nature of the system and is analogous to the staffing of a single class system with the same aggregate demand and the lowest priority class cost and QoS parameters, and (ii) Class level service differentiation is obtained by using a simple threshold-priority (TP) control (with state-independent thresholds), b) Robustness of the staffing and control rules: In the QED regime, our proposed Square-Root Safety (SRS) staffing rule and TP control are asymptotically optimal with respect to various problem formulations and model assumptions. c) The QED and ED regimes are obtained as solutions of the joint staffing and control problem rather than as assumptions.
